

ABSTRACT

The invention relates to an assembly and method of spinning a seamed ball prior to being propelled from a ball propelling machine. The assembly can simulate balls propelled in sports such as baseball. The assembly includes at 5 least one pair of opposed ball supports to firstly position a loaded ball in a predetermined alignment and to subsequently apply a predetermined amount of spin to the ball prior to being fired from the assembly.